“When we talk about furniture styles in interior design - it’s usually always about the sofa. More recently, dining furniture is coming back into the spotlight. The introduction of statement stone and marble effect finishes are set to inspire homeowners looking to revamp their dining room in 2025.

Dining tables are being transformed with the introduction of stunning patterns and textures which evoke the beauty of natural materials. The inspiration for these beautiful designs is the revival of neo-classical design in home décor. The Hellenistic Revival trend is heavily inspired by the style of Ancient Greece, which is opulent and extravagant. Think of accessories like classical busts, statues, oversized vases, Corinthian columns, all the fancy things you would see in an art museum.

Marble or stone is a timeless material which simply emanates luxury - without much effort. It needs neither an introduction, or embellishment. The choice of endless colours and nuances in pattern make choosing a dining table, worktop or splashback a project - rather than a task.

You can opt for classic Carrara marble with its glossy white backdrop and subtle grey streaks. If you want to go bolder, then Calacatta Viola marble has maximum impact with its purple tinge and large, distinctive veins. In terms of colour everything from white to charcoal, creams and browns as well as contemporary green and blue marbles will be on trend for 2025.

The organic texture of marble is enough to transform any dining room into a designer space. Renowned for its luxurious appeal and natural beauty, marble works equally well within minimal and grand, maximal interiors. A Calacatta Viola marble-effect dining table is the perfect accompaniment for period features within your room - such as wall panelling, coving or an ornate ceiling rose. Or you can create just as much impact by placing a black marble-effect slab table within a minimal space - think soft minimalism with a boost of luxe.

Whether you choose to underplay your statement marble table in a simple setting - or make it the hero - marble is guaranteed to elevate your interior. What's more, it's the perfect choice if you want your home to feel like a designer property - but without the high price tag."
